Batik Connection Boxes

In 2001, 2002 and 2003 Raven Hill was awarded annual grants from the Michigan Council for Arts & Cultural Affairs. Each year, the grant award allowed Raven Hill to host artists in residence during the school year and have middle & high school art students complete an art project and learn the science behind the art. The artists were invited back in the summer for a week. Teachers and college students explored a specific art medium in depth. The third part of the grant award funded the creation of Connections boxes featuring the science and history and a how-to of the art. Eleven Connections boxes are on display in the Art Corridor, along with the Center's Raven Art collection. A twelfth Connection Box can be found right inside the Great Room.
