Mission: Raven Hill provides a place that enhances hands-on and lifelong learning for all ages by connecting science, history & the arts.

Following directions

Each person needs a piece of copy paper (can be from the recycle bin) and a flat surface. One person reads the directions as everyone else follows the directions without asking any questions. Keep your eyes closed, so you do “your own thing” and aren’t influenced by what the others are doing. Follow these directions. First, fold the paper in half. Fold the paper in half again. Fold the paper in half a third time. Tear off the corner. Turn the paper over. Tear off the corner. Open your eyes. Open the paper back up. How many different “interpretations” of the same directions were there? I am not including any pictures this time! Don’t want to influence you, but this activity definitely shows the importance of good communications! If you want, send me a picture of your interpretation of the directions!
