Who's got the button?

I'm using a button today, in honor of my mother's 93rd birthday. She has passed, but her love of buttons lives on. You can also use any small object: shell, stone, bead nut or coin. Play with a partner. First person starts with the object, puts their hands behind their back, hides the object in one fist and brings their fists around front. The other person tries to guess which hand has the object. Correct guess: they get a turn. Wrong guess: first person gets a second turn. You can also play it with 4-6 sticks (pencils, toothpicks, real stick, etc). Sticks go on the floor or table between you. If you win, you get a stick. The first person to get all the sticks wins the game. This game has been played, since before recorded history and passed down from generation to generation. Have fun!

Note: Start saving empty boxes, paper towel and TP rolls for a "robot".

2. My favorite object:
Northwest raven button

3. Hide object in fist.

4. Other person guesses &
winner gets next turn.

Old black glass buttons

Keep your favorite object in a safe place for future games.
Enjoy and be sure to put all your supplies away, when you are done.
