June 29, 2020

Butterfly collections are a favorite purchase on a typical family vacation. Often, they end up here at Raven Hill, when people are downsizing their living spaces. From brightly colored butterflies to ones that are camouflaged to look like dead leaves, the Center's collection continues to grow. Included is a silk painting with a butterfly. Seemed like the right connection to go with the preserved ones. My mother and father used to collect "roadkill" butterflies as they took their daily walk. Mom would use them with her pressed flowers to make beautiful cards and framed pictures.
